Experience

Jamie is an experienced member both of One Pump Court's Family Group, and of our Housing and Community Care Team.

His family practice embraces all aspects of children's public law, acting in care and adoption proceedings for parents, children and kinship carers, as well as cases involving the inherent jurisdiction.

His civil practice primarily involves facets of social services law.

His judicial review work embraces adult community care services and support for children in need and their families, looked after children and care leavers. He is experienced in no recourse to public funds and asylum support cases, and in broader housing and homelessness law. He has also dealt with age disputes and unlawful detention, and civil claims against local authorities and others in respect of past service provision.

He has regularly advised as to the responsibilities of health and social services for the continuing health and care needs of both children and adults.

Jamie has also undertaken substantial welfare cases in the Court of Protection.

His past local authority practice included acting as junior counsel for Haringey (with Liz Lawson QC) in the Victoria Climbié Inquiry, community care, and many care, adoption and wardship cases.

He regularly lectures on social welfare law issues, regularly presenting training seminars with Chambers, and he has spoken at HLPAs and Shelter conferences.
